COMPLEX REACTIONS TO PATERNO DEATH

Fans, detractors weigh Penn State coach's legacy in wake of sexual abuse scandal

Reuters

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. Penn State football coach Joe Paterno, the winningest coach in major college football history who was fired in November over a child sexual abuse scandal involving an assistant that rocked the country, died of lung cancer Sunday. He was 85.

Paterno won adoration from fans of the highly successful and profitable Penn State football program and they unleashed invective at the university board of trustees who fired him unceremoniously after 46 years as head coach, tarnishing his outsized legacy.

Equally outraged were his critics and advocates for victims of sexual abuse who faulted Paterno for his relative inaction upon hearing an accusation that former defensive coordinator Jerry Sandusky had sexually abused a young boy in the Penn State football showers in 2002.

Paterno told university officials but not police, opening him to criticism that he protected an accused child molester for nine years.

Sandusky, 67, who has maintained his innocence, faces 52 criminal counts accusing him of sexually abusing 10 boys over 15 years, using his position as head of a The Second Mile, a charity dedicated to helping troubled children, to find his victims. The court placed him under house arrest.

Waves of mourners descended on a makeshift shrine to Paterno outside the university's Beaver Stadium. They draped an American flag on a statue of Paterno and wrapped its neck with a Penn State scarf.

Sobbing at the statue's feet was Dana Gordon, a 1982 graduate who blamed the school's board of trustees for hastening

Paterno's death by firing him in a "callous way."

"The way the board treated him took a lot of the fight out of him," Gordon said.

The case raised questions about the measures the university took to protect Sandusky and a football program that Forbes magazine estimated made a profit of $53 million in 2010, especially since accusations against him first surfaced in 1998. At that time a university police detective admonished Sandusky to stop showering naked with boys but stopped short of bringing criminal charges.

Sandusky sends condolences

Former Penn State assistant coach Jerry Sandusky, accused in a child sex abuse scandal, expressed condolences for the death of former Penn State head football coach Joe Paterno on Sunday.

"This is a sad day! Our family, [wife] Dottie and I would like to convey our deepest sympathy to [Paterno's wife] Sue and her family," Sandusky said in an emailed statement sent by his attorney.

"Nobody did more for the academic reputation of Penn State than Joe Paterno. He maintained a high standard in a very difficult profession."

The criminal investigation against Sandusky contributed to Paterno's firing in November after 46 years as head coach. Sandusky has maintained his innocence. REUTERS

Tebow's message is loud and clear

Stephen Markley

» redeye@tribune.com

Count me as a guy seriously bummed about Tim Tebow and the Denver Broncos' ignominious exit from this year's NFL playoffs, but not for any football reason (although my opinion of Patriots quarterback Tom Brady shares a lot in common with how I view the puslike fluid that accumulates in the chaffing fat rolls of hippopotamuses).

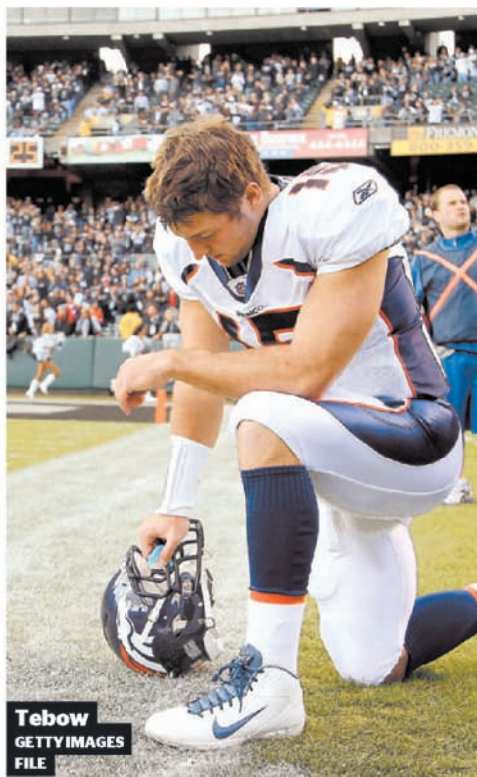

No, I love Tebow and want him to succeed because he is one of those big, bold, brash, larger-than-life public figures who demonstrates so perfectly the utter vapidness and silliness of religion.

Now obviously to a certain set of church-, synagogue- and mosque-attending individuals, I have already lost this argument. Religion is the one topic where you can have 100 percent of the evidence on your side yet lose the debate every time. Thus you walk around in life with a turtle in your hand saying, "Hey, guys, check out my turtle." And people look at it and say, "Nope, that's definitely a miter saw."

However, Tebow's massive cultural significance as a carrier of superstition's torch awakens a hope in me that for every child from an evangelical family who views him as the torchbearer, there are many more who are secretly embarrassed that the best proof of their faith comes in the form of hail mary passes that defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers.

They look at Tebow, a privileged white male who views his First World success as an entitlement bestowed upon him by a magic man in the sky, and say, "Ah, wait, um, while Christians just as devout starve in Somalia or get their hands cut off in the Congo or remain grounded in an endless cycle of poverty in this country's urban ghettos and failing rural communities, the ever-useless answer that 'God works in mysterious ways' somehow leads people to conclude that Jesus spared this one guy from an abortion so he could lead the Broncos to an 8-8 regular-season record?"

"And maybe," these kids will continue, "if it's so clearly idiotic that God would care about football, where's the burden of proof for any of this? And isn't it a massive logical fallacy to think that I can't be a decent, kind, loving person without pretending to see a miter saw when that's so clearly a turtle?"

Tebow
GETTY IMAGES

That's why I'll still have Tebow Fever next season!

Because he's making converts, just not the kind he thinks. Because the miter saw has been collapsing under its own asininity for all of human history, and it's always the true believers who help it along, who inadvertently reveal not only how boldly preposterous it all is but then highlight the miter saw's darkest elements: how it's just prejudice by another name, how it remains frighteningly hostile to any science that questions its foundational fairy tales, how it demands of its adherents servility, ignorance and a willingness to eschew intellectual curiosity, how the all-purpose answer "God did it" is almost an insult to being alive and capable of asking questions about the unknown nature of reality humming on the quantum level in all its mystery.

Also, that sack of fat roll-pus Tom Brady got back to the Super Bowl. There's your proof of a God-less universe. REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR

CHICAGO DANGER ZONES

REDEYE EXAMINES 12 MONTHS OF HOMICIDES IN THE CITY

By Tracy Swartz

REDEYE

Chicago homicides were down 2 percent citywide last year compared with 2010, but there were a few communities on the South and West sides that saw their homicide numbers rise, RedEye data shows.

Chicago logged 440 homicides in 2011, down from 449 in 2010, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found. However, some areas—including Austin, Englewood and Woodlawn—saw an increase of 30 percent or more in their homicide numbers from 2010 to 2011, according to RedEye data.

Sgt. Antoinette Ursitti said Chicago police are compiling final homicide numbers for 2011 and would not comment until then.

RedEye data shows that while overall homicide numbers were down, the number of gunshot fatalities rose from 364 victims in 2010 to 371 in 2011. The number of people stabbed and strangled to death were down in 2011 compared to the previous year.

The city saw improvement in homicide numbers in the summer months, typically the time of the year when violence rises. Homicide numbers were down in May, June and August compared with 2010, but the city didn't fare as well in the cold weather months.

Homicides were up September through December compared with that same period in 2010, a trend that is continuing into 2012.

While no homicide is typical, there are some patterns in violent crime. For example, gunshot victims tend to be young black males killed on the South Side. One in four assault and abuse victims were female. RedEye took a look at 2011 homicide statistics based on gender, race and age of the victims and the type, time and location of the crimes. SLOW GOING

CTA BLAMES SUPPLIER FOR PULLED 'L' CARS

Chicago Tribune

X-rays and stress tests to detect possible metal fatigue are being conducted on a critical component of the CTA's still-out-of-service new rail cars, according to officials from the CTA and the manufacturer.

More than a month has passed since the trains were removed from service Dec. 16 and production of new cars was halted, officials said. Forty cars had been running on the Pink Line and 12 additional cars were delivered and being prepped for service when the decision to park them was made as a safety precaution, CTA officials said.

Until testing to identify the problem is completed, both the CTA and Bombardier Transportation, the Canada-based rail car manufacturer, will say little about the quality defects that first were found in November by CTA inspectors on a part of steel wheel-bearing castings called the journal bearing housing.

The journal bearing housing is part of the car's truck assembly, which contains the axles and wheels and attaches to the rail car chassis, Bombardier said. The journal bearing housing allows the movement of the wheels to be independent of the axle.

"This is not a public process that we are going to air in public," CTA spokeswoman Molly Sullivan said last week in response to repeated questions from the Tribune about the production setback.

The $1.14 billion CTA order for 706 Bombardier rail cars is taxpayer-funded. Delivery was scheduled for completion in 2014, including 192 cars in 2012, but the timetable may need to be extended, officials said.

Mayor Rahm Emanuel shows off new rail cars at the Midway Orange Line "L" Stop in November.
 HEATHER CHARLES/TRIBUNE FILE

CTA is the launch customer of the new-generation 5000 Series Bombardier trains, which feature a new propulsion system to deliver a smoother ride, electronic route maps on board and aisle-facing seats.

The flaws with the journal bearing housing appear to be more serious than what CTA President Forrest Claypool described as the routine working out of minor bugs that occur with new equipment.

"We are working diligently to try to come to a solution and come to a conclusion," Sullivan said. "We don't want to commit to a time [when the problem will be corrected.] These are very complex metallurgic, forensic tests that need to be done."

REWIND

The CTA is no stranger to major problems stretching across an entire fleet line. In early 2009, the transit agency permanently removed from service about 225 accordion-style buses after cracks and structural failures were found in the vehicles, which averaged about 4 years old.

DREW PETERSON WATCH

Peterson finds Lifetime movie 'hysterical'

Sitting Saturday in the Will County Jail, Drew Peterson watched a Lifetime movie about the five years leading up to his arrest and found it "hysterical."

His missing fourth wife's family, meanwhile, was stunned by the inaccuracies and jumbled timeline.

The cable TV movie, "Drew Peterson: Untouchable," depicts the retired Bolingbrook police sergeant as a loutish misogynist who killed his third wife, Kathleen Savio, and caused his fourth wife, Stacy Peterson, to disappear.

Peterson, 58, is charged with murdering Savio, who was found dead in a dry bathtub in 2004. Officials initially ruled the death an accidental drowning, but authorities reopened the case after Stacy Peterson vanished in October 2007. TRIBUNE

Insurgents kill 178 in Nigeria

KANO, Nigeria Gun and bomb attacks by Islamist insurgents in the northern Nigerian city of Kano last week killed at least 178 people, a hospital doctor said Sunday, underscoring the challenge President Goodluck Jonathan faces to prevent his country sliding further into chaos.

A coordinated series of bomb blasts and shooting sprees mostly targeting police stations Friday sent panicked residents of Nigeria's second biggest city of more than 10 million people running for cover.

The scale of the carnage makes this by far the deadliest strike claimed by Boko Haram, a shadowy Islamist sect that started out as a clerical movement opposed to western education but has become the biggest security menace facing Africa's top oil producer.

"We have 178 people killed in the two main hospitals," the senior doctor in Kano's Murta-la Mohammed hospital said following Friday's attacks, citing records from his own and the other main hospital of Nasarawa.

Boko Haram has been blamed for killing hundreds of people in increasingly sophisticated bombings and shootings, mostly targeting security forces, establishment figures and more recently Christians, in the country of 160 million people split roughly evenly between them and Muslims.

A further 10 people were killed Sunday in Bauchi state, which neighbors Kano, when police fought gunmen attempting to rob a bank, the police said.

DEATH TOLL RISES: Oil recovery workers pass in front of the Costa Concordia cruise ship, which ran aground Jan. 13 off the west coast of Italy. The ship's operators faced questions over their share of the blame for the shipwreck, as divers recovered another body from the stricken liner Sunday, bringing the known death toll to 13. REUTERS

Yemeni president leaves office

Outgoing President Ali Abdullah Saleh apologized for "any shortcoming" in his 33-year rule before leaving Yemen for the U.S. on Sunday, paving the way for a transfer of power after a year of unrest.

The U.S. State Department confirmed it had given him a visa for medical treatment.

Thousands of Yemenis protested Sunday against Saleh's immunity and demanded he be put on trial for the killing of hundreds of demonstrators during a year of unrest that brought the impoverished Arabian Peninsula country to the verge of civil war.

Islamists find voice in Egypt

Egypt's newly elected parliament convenes Monday for the first time since the downfall of Hosni Mubarak with Islamists dominating a legislature in which they once had no presence.

Religious groups led by the Muslim Brotherhood's Freedom & Justice party won 235 of the 498 elected seats, or 47 percent of the total.

While the elections were the freest in decades, the seven weeks of voting failed to allay tensions between the activists who ousted Mubarak and the military council that took power from him.

Giffords to resign

PHOENIX Rep. Gabrielle Giffords, shot in the head during a shooting spree in Tucson, Ariz., last year, said Sunday she will step down this week from Congress to focus on her recovery.

"I have more work to do on my recovery, so to do what is best for Arizona I will step down this week," Giffords said, posting the announcement on social media including Twitter, Facebook and YouTube.

"I'm getting better. Every day my spirit is high. I will return and we will work together for Arizona and this great country. Thank you very much," she added.

Giffords' office said the congresswoman would submit her letter of resignation this week to House Speaker John Boehner and Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer.

Giffords, a Democrat who gained a reputation as a centrist, is serving her third term. She plans to attend President Obama's State of the Union address to Congress on Tuesday.

Brewer said Arizona law required her to hold a special election to determine Giffords' replacement.

Giffords was shot through the head Jan. 8, 2011, when a gunman opened fire at a congressional outreach meeting in Tucson, killing six people and wounding 12. Giffords' office said she would meet privately with some of the people who attended that event before leaving office.

S. Carolina, Norris pick Gingrich

Newt Gingrich's victory in South Carolina's Republican presidential primary Saturday raises the stakes in the next contest in Florida.

Gingrich won 40 percent of the vote in South Carolina. Mitt Romney, a former Massachusetts governor, ran second with 28 percent, with 99 percent of the vote counted.

"Walker, Texas Ranger" himself, Chuck Norris, also endorsed Gingrich in a blog post over the weekend.

Boehner: Obama's message 'pathetic'

House Speaker John Boehner called President Obama's upcoming State of the Union speech "pathetic" for rehashing stale Democratic priorities, even as Republicans are doubling-down on their own agenda that found little traction outside the GOP-led House.

"It sounds to me like the same old policies that we've seen: more spending, higher taxes more regulation," Boehner said Sunday.

"If that's what the president is going to talk about Tuesday night, I think it's pathetic."

'At Last' singer Etta James dead at 73

Etta James, the earthy blues and R&B singer, died Friday of complications from leukemia. She was 73.

Perhaps the quintessential R&B diva, James, who was born and lived much of her life in L.A., was equally at home singing unadulterated blues, searing R&B and sophisticated jazz. She was adored by rock's elite and was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in 1993.

She is best known for "At Last," the powerhouse ballad that became a hit in 1961.

SUPER COLLIDER

Patriots, Giants to battle for NFL title—who has the edge?

RedEye

One game came down to a missed kick that could have forced overtime. The other came down to a winning kick in overtime.

NFL fans can only hope the New England-New York Super Bowl is as entertaining.

Tom Brady and the Patriots advanced first Sunday after Baltimore kicker Billy Cundiff failed to nail a 32-yard field goal in the final seconds that would have tied the game at 23 and sent it to overtime. In San Francisco, the Giants and 49ers did go to overtime to settle their bout. The Giants won it after Kyle Williams fumbled a punt and gave New York possession in field goal range. Lawrence Tynes kicked the game winner, giving the Giants a 20-17 win.

The Patriots-Giants matchup will be a rematch of the 2008 title game that New York won 17-14, ruining New England's undefeated season. How do the two Super Bowls compare? Here's a primer.

TEAM RECORDS

2008: Patriots 18-0, Giants 13-5
2012: Patriots 15-3, Giants 12-7.

Billy Cundiff

Kicked in the ...

NFL kickers don't get much respect to begin with—and this isn't going to help.

Baltimore kicker Billy Cundiff became the instant goat of the NFL playoffs Sunday when he missed a 32-yard field goal that could have tied the Ravens with New England and sent the AFC title game into overtime.

Instead, the Ravens are going home while the Patriots are going to the Super Bowl again.

"Let's keep this simple," Cundiff, 31, told reporters afterward. "That's a kick I've kicked 1,000 times in my career but today I didn't convert. That's the way things go, but there's no excuse for it."

1 What was your knee-jerk reaction to Joe Paterno's death?

He was great at making adjustments, except for the one time it really, truly mattered.

He did a good job for a long time. If you don't participate in hero worship, then you'll never be disappointed.

My sympathies to everyone who knew him.

That only a jerk would make a knee-jerk reaction to someone's death.

I'm turning a blind eye to this question ...

2 Why is the NHL so much more secretive about injuries than other leagues?

It's not that hockey players are secretive—there just isn't a medical term for "bones feel like tapioca today."

Because they know big hits and bloody brawls keep them relevant compared to other sports.

Other leagues? Have you ever read a Lovie Smith injury report?

Russian spies.

I'm asking my "upper body" and it's not responding.

3 What's behind the latest wave of Bulls injuries?

I blame the Miami Heat. I also blame the Miami Heat for red light cameras, the recession, TLC reality shows ...

Trying to get Scalabrini some of that prime-time spotlight, duh!

Miami Heat fans making voodoo dolls.

The guys wanted a few days off to catch up on old "Mad Men" episodes before the new season.

Deng bangs are exhausting and hard on the body.

4 So many Bulls players are hurting ...

... they've replaced the Dunkin' Donuts Race on the scoreboard with "Quick, Read This MRI and Make a Diagnosis!"

... said it last week, still applies: They should just draft the entire FSU basketball team.

... I'm waiting to get offered a 10-day contract due to my success in "NBA Jam."

... the White Mamba might have to make a start.

... that the first 10,000 fans receive a commemorative walking boot at tonight's game.

5 What kind of reaction will Adam Dunn get at this weekend's SoxFest?

Lots of swings. He better hope fans match his contact rate.

I hope they throw the book at him. The book called "The Science of Hitting" by Ted Williams.

Immediate adoration followed by constant loathing.

I'm sure the three or four people who attend SoxFest this year will really let him have it.

I have a feeling Sox fans aren't Dunn booing him and they're still Peavy'd at Jake.

Bulls fright

Injuries pile up for NBA's best team

RedEye

Rip Hamilton. C.J. Watson. Luol Deng. Derrick Rose. Taj Gibson. Joakim Noah. John Lucas III.

That'd be a pretty good starting five and sixth and seventh men for an NBA team. But, unfortunately, it's the list of Bulls players who've lost playing time to injuries 18 games into the lockout-shortened 66-game season.

Saturday night alone, the Bulls played without four players.

"Injuries are a part of the game," coach Tom Thibodeau said Saturday. "There's a reason you carry 13 or 14 players. If one guy goes down, the next guy has to step up and be ready."

Here's the rundown of the walking wounded.

Luol Deng

The "glue" man for the Bulls, as Thibodeau calls him, sprained his wrist in Saturday night's win over Charlotte. X-rays were negative, but he's listed as day-to-day.

Taj Gibson

One of the first big men off the bench, Gibson didn't play Saturday night after suffering the dreaded high ankle sprain during Friday's win in Cleveland. "It's sore," Gibson said. "It's real sore. Just have to take a slow. [I'm] lucky nothing was broken, nothing torn. That's the bright side."

Rip Hamilton

The veteran guard, signed in the offseason to start in place of the departed Keith Bogans, has missed 10 games with a groin injury.

John Lucas III

Lucas can thank injuries for his increase in playing time this season, but he too was relegated to the bench Saturday night with a groin injury.

Joakim Noah

An ankle injury kept Noah on the bench Saturday after it appeared he would play. He was hurt Friday night in Cleveland.

Derrick Rose

The reigning MVP has been hampered by a big toe sprain, though he plans to return to the court Monday.

C.J. Watson

Rose's backup missed a stretch of games after dislocating his elbow. He's now starting in Rose's absence. "We've got subs who easily can start for other teams," Carlos Boozer said recently. It's a good thing too.

GREAT ANTHEM? DREAM ON

Proud Bostonian Steven Tyler sang the national anthem before Sunday's New England-Baltimore game and, well, it sounded just like you might imagine it. Tyler isn't exactly known for his smooth voice and he couldn't hit the high notes. To his credit, he only slightly messed up the lyrics, singing "as bomb bursting in air" instead of "the bombs bursting in air."

'American Idol' fantasy smackdown

Newsday

"American Idol" returned last week, down in viewers from last year but still at the top of the ratings.

Before producers decided to draft Jennifer Lopez and Steven Tyler as judges two seasons ago, they considered having a season of "Idol All-Stars," with previous winners returning to compete against each other.

That was scrapped, reportedly due to the result of lack of interest from the more successful winners. But what if it actually happened? Here's how we think the first 10 winners would rank:

Kelly Clarkson

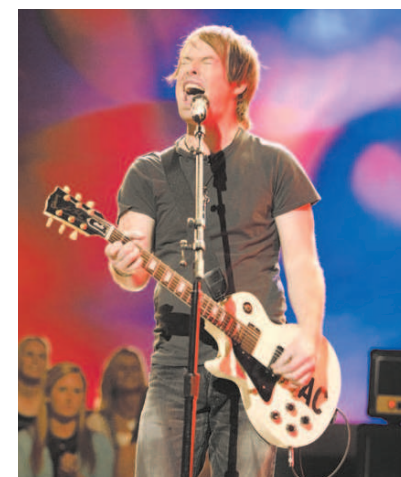

The original "Idol" is still the best. She has a distinctive voice that can handle a variety of styles well and probably still is the most likable of the group. So far, none of the winners has a signature hit as potent as "Since U Been Gone."

Carrie Underwood

She comes close to Clarkson on nearly every score (and surpasses her on sales). Their battle would result in quite the finale.

David Cook

He's the most inventive "Idol," by far, in terms of arranging and rearranging songs for his radio-friendly voice.

4 Fantasia
When she's on, she's hard to beat, and it's hard to match her passion on the right material. However, she should be a way bigger star than she is—man, is “Bump What Ya Friends Say” ready for a remake—and somehow doesn't have the connection with fans that she should.

Jordin Sparks
5 The sweet-heart of the bunch has a great voice and personality, but still is struggling to find where she fits in the pop scene.

Scotty McCreery
6 “This Big” is destined for big things, as he revives the very specific Garth Brooks-style country star mold.

Ruben Studdard
7 “The Velvet Teddy Bear” is in the midst of a comeback of sorts, tapping into an old-school R&B style with his warm delivery.

Kris Allen
8 He was certainly likable and his Jason Mraz-y delivery certainly was timely, but he has yet to connect with music fans on a larger scale.

Taylor Hicks
9 His larger-than-life persona and big, unusual voice made him unique, if not necessarily popular.

Lee DeWyze
10 Being a nice guy with a nice voice hasn't quite translated into a big following, despite the huge “Idol” platform.

LORI ANDREWS AT CPL
Lori Andrews, internationally acclaimed legal pioneer in the areas of modern ethics and privacy, discusses and signs her latest book, I Know Who You Are and I Saw What You Did: Social Networks and the Death of Privacy at the Chicago Public Library. The free program takes place on Wednesday, February 1 at 6:00 p.m., in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium (Lower Level) at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. Social networks are the defining cultural movement of our time. Andrews presents shocking depiction of how the web is being used to violate our basic individual rights. She has written a much-overdue Constitution for the web, which extends our basic rights to this wild new frontier. For more information, visit the Library's website at chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call the Chicago Public Library at (312) 747-4050. Photo credit: John McArthur

horoscope

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

A bouncy sun in your sign has you thinking about your long-term future. You've decided you want to marry an astronaut. Or you're figuring out the names for those 10 kids you want to have someday.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

Mars is making you wonder about the intentions of that sexy someone. If you've been in a relationship for a while, you could be questioning the longevity of this romance.

Aries March 21-April 19

The start of the Chinese New Year is filling you with optimism. It's the year of the Dragon, so expect your libido to be high and your luck to be strong.

Taurus April 20-May 20

Your honey could go all emotional on you at the worst time. You've been working a million hours and coming home exhausted, and now your boyfriend wants to discuss "the future."

Gemini May 21-June 21

Someone smarter than you is trying to tell you something. Maybe your best friend is warning you against dating that girl who is too good to be true. Saturn says pay attention.

Cancer June 22-July 22

Everyone is oversensitive right now, including your romantic partner, your postal carrier and your dog. You can thank a watery moon for that. Tread lightly and avoid potentially explosive discussions about politics, religion or orgasms.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

A casual friend could be interested in becoming something more, to your surprise. Mercury is changing intellectual chemistry into something more physical. You could find yourself getting sweaty with a total geek or an unconventionally attractive gal.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

It's not your job to change people. Remember that. Venus is showing you that your partner is imperfect, your boss is kind of a loser and your parents possess many fatal flaws. But that doesn't mean you can't be loving, forgiving and patient.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

You're tempted to make some huge change, but the moon says it could be ill-advised. Do you really think if you join that expensive gym that you'll go there every day?

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Mars is turning you into a sex fiend. You'll be hitting on everything that moves. Unfortunately, some of the objects of your lusty attention might not appreciate it. It's best not to proposition your receptionist, your married neighbor or your pizza delivery guy.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You could receive a freaky invitation, thanks to Uranus. Maybe a couple will ask you to join them in a threesome. The plot thickens.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Pluto is trying to improve your social life, but you're fighting it. Winter often puts you in a paranoid, human-hating mood and you tend to see the negative side of society instead of the positive aspects. Get over it.

Hart attack

The comedian from Philly is getting funnier with age

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» @aboutluisgomez

Fifteen minutes before the Bulls faced off with Charlotte on Saturday, Kevin Hart was on his phone in a Michigan Avenue store trying to get an extra ticket to the game for his friend.

Hart didn't expect to make it to the United Center by tipoff. After all, he first needed to take part in a Q&A session with the fans who were waiting downstairs for him in the store. But Hart—who visited Chicago briefly Thursday to tape "The Rosie Show," only to return Saturday for the in-store appearance—was optimistic he could catch part of the game.

"I'm hoping to get there by halftime," Hart told me once he was off the phone.

Hart's schedule likely doesn't allow for much these days. He is promoting the DVD and Blu-ray release of his stand-up comedy film, "Laugh at My Pain," which revolves around his divorce, his mother's death and his once drug-addicted father, and he soon will begin his "Let Me Explain" tour, which he said will focus on the mistakes he's made.

The Philadelphia native is quick to make fun of himself and his flaws, but his 15-year career has never been hotter. Hart has more Twitter followers than Jerry Seinfeld, Chris Rock and Louis C.K. combined and can be seen with Gabrielle Union in "Think Like a Man" (due out March 9) and with Jason Segel in "The Five-Year Engagement" (due out April 27). Hart also now has a recurring role on "Modern Family."

"Yes, I've gotten funnier," Hart, 31, said when I asked why he is just now tasting this level of success. "My experiences in life are getting bigger and better. The more stuff I do, the more stuff I talk about—having kids, traveling, going through relationship problems, dealing with things in my own family. All that stuff builds character. It's allowed me to separate myself from the pack and individualize myself. ... At the end of the day, I want to be part of the same conversation as Chris Rock, Eddie Murphy, Dave Chappelle, Bill Cosby and Richard Pryor."

Kevin Hart on Saturday during his Michigan Avenue Q&A.

“It was supposed to be stupid. People who try to judge it should kill themselves. The movie is about a purple plane.” —Kevin Hart on "Soul Plane," in which he played Nashawn

ALSO SPOTTED ...

» It looks like Theo Epstein might already have a go-to spot in Chicago. The Cubs president of baseball operations dined at R.J. Grunts in Lincoln Park three times in the past two weeks, including Tuesday and Thursday.

» Kathy Griffin had dinner at Paris Club and Hub 51 on Friday and Saturday, respectively, while in town for her shows at the Chicago Theatre.

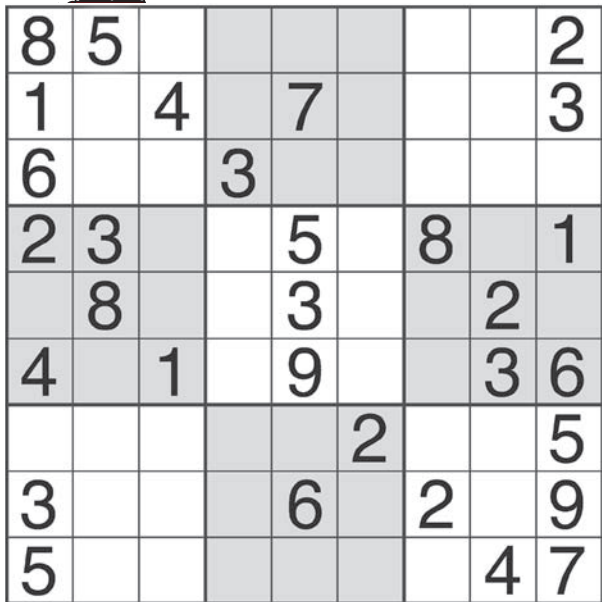

» "The Real Housewives of Atlanta" star NeNe Leakes had dinner at Paris Club on Jan. 16 while in Chicago to film an episode of "The Rosie Show."

» Following their win over San Jose on Jan. 15, the Blackhawks' Patrick Kane, Corey Crawford and Niklas Hjalmarsson dined at Chicago Cut Steakhouse. Kane dined at Joe's Seafood, Prime Steak & Stone Crab on Thursday.

» The Phoenix Suns' Steve Nash had lunch at Le Colonial on Jan. 16. Teammates Grant Hill, Jared Dudley and Michael Redd had dinner at Gibsons Bar & Steakhouse in the Gold Coast that night.

» The Bulls' Omer Asik ate at David Burke's Primehouse in The James hotel Jan. 16.
